Teton's 100% grass-fed, grass-finished beef hot dogs and hamburgers will fuel Friday family lunches at CYO's summer camp.

"At Teton Waters Ranch, we believe strong families are the foundation of strong, healthy communities," said CEO Kevin Pallaoro. "Supporting Colorado Youth Outdoors' mission is a natural fit for us. We're honored to contribute to an experience that helps parents and kids build lasting bonds in the great outdoors."

Colorado Youth Outdoors Northeast Executive Director Luke Brough, Program Manager Claire Haenny and Teton Waters Ranch CEO Kevin Pallaoro prepare the picnic area for family lunch.

Each Friday, families join campers for lunch at the CYO campus which provides an opportunity for everyone to connect, unwind, and share what they learned from the week's adventures in archery, fishing, canoeing and more. Thanks to Teton Waters Ranch's donation, families can enjoy a delicious meal while focusing on what matters most: spending time together.

Teton Waters Ranch is committed to helping families enjoy better beef without sacrificing flavor, convenience, or values. Their grass-fed hot dogs, dinner and breakfast sausages, and burgers are Whole30 Approved and made with clean ingredients. The beef is sourced from humane farms that never use antibiotics or growth hormones. From pasture to plate, every product reflects their dedication to animal welfare, sustainable practices, and real, wholesome food.

Colorado Youth Outdoors serves thousands of youth and families each year through programs designed to foster connection, confidence, and character. With the support of local partners like Teton Waters Ranch, CYO is able to expand its impact and create even more meaningful experiences for families across northern Colorado.

“We’re thrilled to serve Teton Waters Ranch grass-fed beef to our campers and families,” said Luke Brough, Northeast Executive Director of Colorado Youth Outdoors. “It really elevates our Friday lunches which cap off a week of adventure and connection.
