

New Ariana Colletti Single Brings Clarity To Overthinkers

"6am" Offers Message of Hope and Rebirth

NEW YORK, NY, UNITED STATES, July 4, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Released today, "6am" is the newest song from singer, songwriter, piano player Ariana Colletti, encouraging listeners to begin anew at sunrise. Recorded at The Hilson Studio in Nashville and produced by Tyler Skye, the piano ballad delves into thoughts that come when we should be sleeping.

The track is available on Apple Music, Spotify, Amazon Music, Deezer, and other online digital music retailers and streaming platforms.

The chorus includes:

It's crazy how in the middle of the night

The darkness shines and the world goes quiet

The beauty in the silence

I have finally achieved a song that sounds like me.”

“6am is about that feeling when you have been up late thinking about everything too much,” Colletti explains. “There's a point in the night where you look out to the sky and realize the beauty and depth it holds. The stillness of the atmosphere allows your mind to think and Done as a solo write, the new track is meant to encourage listeners. Colletti says, “Even though the song touches on missing out on something, or someone, it also sends a message of hope that after all of the thinking and memories, the sun will come up soon, and you get a chance to restart.”

About today’s release, Colletti, whose music is considered pop and indie-pop with alternative influences, said, “After years of releasing music, and trying to figure out my sound as an artist, I have finally achieved a song that sounds like me.”
