

Ruadán Books Announces the Table of Contents, Cover, and Availability for Their Original Anthology: Spring in the City

Ruadán Books announces the publication date, cover, preorder availability and the table of contents for their third original anthology: Spring in the City.

BOSTON, MA, UNITED STATES, June 23, 2025

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Ruadán Books announces the publication date, preorder availability and the table of contents for their third original anthology: Spring in the City.

The anthology, co-edited by founder R. B. Wood and Anna Koon, explores dark tales set in cities around the world as spring arrives and they burst into bloom, creating ever darker shadows.

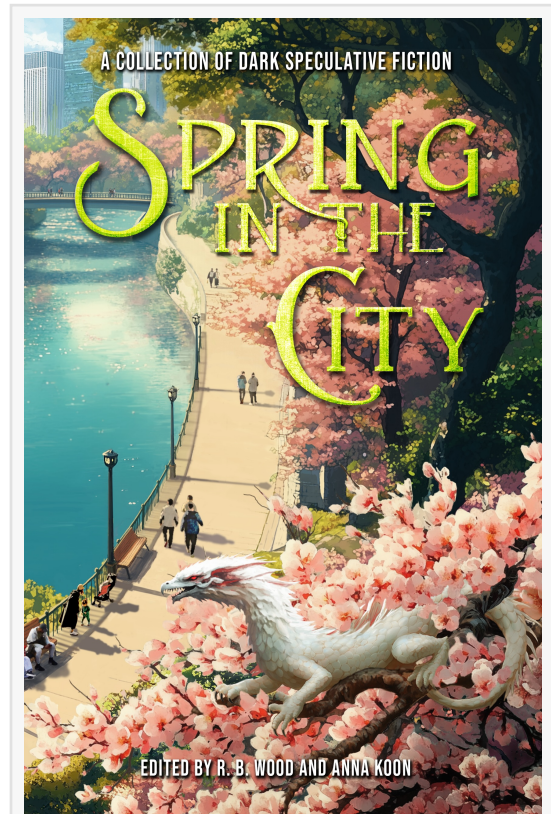

The colorful yet sinister cover design by Kip Ayers highlights this dichotomy.

"Living in New England, the onset of spring is always welcome in Boston," says founder and editor R. B. Wood. "But what if the life that starts anew in the season is darker and hungrier than the crocuses and returning robins? This is what our authors explore in our second '...in the City' anthology."

Spring in the City will release on December 2nd, 2025, and will be available for order or purchase at book retailers and online stores. Pre-orders will begin on July 1st, 2025 at www.ruadanbooks.com.

Along with featuring multiple award-winning authors, Ruadán Books takes great pride in introducing nine new authors to the world through Spring in the City:

About R.B. Wood

Former technologist, entrepreneur, world traveler, author, and editor R. B. Wood is an MFA graduate from Emerson College and the founder of Ruadán Books. As a dark speculative storyteller, Wood has had novels and short stories published online and traditionally. His thriller Bayou

Whispers blends the horrors of everyday life with that of the supernatural through the story of no-nonsense New Orleans native and Katrina survivor Jeannine LaRue, with plenty of plot twists and dark mystery. R.B. and his wife Tina adore animals and are self-professed “crazy cat people.”

About Anna Koon

Boston-based artist and writer Anna Koon has published articles for a variety of periodicals, one poem, two screenplays, and a children's book entitled Willamina, Queen of the Worms. She is the founder and director of an educational series presented to various arts organizations throughout Massachusetts. Additionally, she works as a creative coach and editor. Anna lives at the top of what was once the women's quarters of a Victorian mental institution with her husband and two whippets, Zeta Puppis and Nimble Nimbus. Learn more about her @ www.a2n2.net.
