With over 40 years of experience in the industry, Matthew Hartley crafts authentic and relatable music by blending traditional instruments with modern production techniques. "Heaven's Calling," written by Hartley, is a testament to his commitment of exploring life's complexities through song. Heartfelt lyrics, such as "The times are calling. Heaven open up your gate. Let your mind be free to follow. " serve as a universal call to hope and redemption, that is resonating deeply with listeners worldwide.

Filmed in Charleston, South Carolina, the music video for "Heaven's Calling" intertwines Hartley's personal trials with the stories of those impacted by catastrophic weather events. "This video reflects my own pain that led me to Jesus, but it also honors the struggles of those affected by an onslaught of tragic natural disasters happening all around us," Hartley explains. "Suffering comes in many forms, but what matters is recognizing that Heaven's Calling through it all. Those who hear that call are truly blessed." The video's evocative visuals utilize footage from multiple recent events across the United States. The visual not only captivates audiences, but serves to amplify the song's message, forging a profound connection with its viewers.
