Daniel brings years of courtroom experience to the firm, having handled a wide range of cases from DUIs and property crimes to complex felony trials involving Measure 11 charges. Before joining Gilroy Napoli Short, Olsen served as a Deputy District Attorney in Marion County, where he prosecuted a wide range of cases—from misdemeanors to serious felonies. This prosecutorial experience gives him a deep understanding of how criminal cases are constructed and litigated—an invaluable advantage when building effective defense strategies. In addition to his time as a prosecutor, Daniel also worked for several years as a defense attorney, representing clients facing a variety of charges and further sharpening his courtroom acumen. His broader legal practice has also included family law and civil litigation, making him a well-rounded and versatile advocate.

Olsen earned his Juris Doctor from Willamette University College of Law, where he was Editor-in-Chief of Willamette Law Online and a key contributor to the Willamette Journal of International Law and Dispute Resolution. His undergraduate studies at Whitworth University—where he majored in Political Science and played college baseball—prepared him for a dynamic legal career.

His balanced background and dedication to strong client advocacy align seamlessly with our mission of delivering personalized, high-caliber criminal defense.”
