What's Driving The Growth Of The Automated People Mover Market?

The growth of the automated people mover market is spurred by the increasing demand for public transportation. Public transit systems, operated by government or private entities, provide shared transportation services to the general public. As investments in infrastructure, population growth, urbanisation, and environmental concerns continue to rise, demand for public transportation surges in response. APMs, by seamlessly integrating with subways, buses, and trains, effectively reduce obstructions in public transportation offering automated transit options. This integration establishes a cohesive system making city travel more accessible, and consequently, driving market growth.
