Pest Control Vancouver: Surge in Wasp Activity Expected This Summer

With wasp calls set to surge, Pest Detective urges Vancouver homeowners to act before nests become a threat.

VANCOUVER, BC, CANADA, June 24, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- As summer kicks into full swing Pest Detective Vancouver is preparing for a potential surge in wasp activity across the city. While early season calls have been quieter than usual longtime owner Chris Frederick says this calm typically precedes a spike in wasp activity.

"In Vancouver wasp calls are currently down but in our experience that usually means a sharp increase is coming by July or August" said Chris Frederick owner of Pest Detective Vancouver. "The season could stretch well into fall. Great if you're a wasp not so great for families trying to enjoy their backyards."

General pest management and prevention

While wasps are expected to dominate calls this summer Pest Detective Vancouver has already seen a sharp rise in carpenter ant issues this spring.

"We're seeing more carpenter ant activity than usual" Frederick added. "It could be due to a milder winter but we also think more homeowners are choosing us because of our longstanding reputation in the community."

These infestations often go unnoticed until they escalate. Wasp nests can be hidden in trees wall voids sheds or under decks. Carpenter ants meanwhile pose a serious risk to wood structures if not addressed promptly.
