Sean McAuliffe Takes Podium at Watkins Glen

Driving for Precision Performance Motorsports (PPM) alongside co-driver Sebastian Carazo, McAuliffe piloted the Lamborghini Huracán Super Trofeo EVO2 through one of the fastest and most demanding circuits on the schedule, marking his first-ever race at Watkins Glen.

"Even though I've lived in New York my whole life, this was my first time racing at The Glen—and what an experience. The speed, the flow, the challenge... it's unlike anything else," said McAuliffe. "To walk away with a podium on debut is something I'm proud of—but it's just the beginning."

McAuliffe, who resides in Huntington, NY, is not only carving out a name for himself in professional motorsports but also as a seasoned business leader, currently serving as Chief Marketing Officer of Automotive Keys Group and founder of several successful e-commerce ventures.

"I know firsthand how powerful motorsports can be as a platform for brand storytelling and client engagement. Lamborghini's trackside hospitality is first class—it's a unique opportunity for businesses to entertain key clients, build relationships, and generate memorable brand exposure," he added.

Sean is actively seeking Long Island-based sponsors to partner with him for the remainder of the 2024 Lamborghini Super Trofeo season. Sponsorship packages include:

- High-quality video and photo assets
- Trackside hospitality access at IMSA events
- In-person appearances
- Opportunities to showcase the race car at corporate events (schedule permitting)

The next round of the championship takes place at Road America from July 31 – August 3, one of McAuliffe's favorite circuits.
