global authority in medical device cybersecurity, announces the release of the 25th episode of The Med Device Cyber Podcast. The episode, titled “Cybersecurity Labeling and MedTech Transparency”, delivers critical insights into one of the most pressing issues facing device manufacturers today: how to communicate cybersecurity clearly, credibly, and compliantly.

Hosted by Christian Espinosa, Founder and CEO, and Trevor Slattery, Chief Technology Officer, this milestone episode defines the next chapter of secure medical innovation—where transparent cybersecurity labeling becomes central to patient safety, regulatory compliance, and market success.

“Labeling isn’t just about checkboxes—it’s about trust,” said Slattery. “This episode is for every medtech leader who wants to lead with clarity and ship with confidence.”

In Episode 25, listeners will learn:

- How FDA and global regulators are moving toward mandatory cybersecurity labeling.
- What SBOMs, threat modeling, and risk disclosures need to look like on-device and in documentation.
- How transparency can be a competitive advantage—not just a compliance obligation.
- Real-world pitfalls that delay market access—and how to avoid them.
