generated $11 billion in 2022, and is anticipated to generate $21.4 billion by 2032, rising at a CAGR of 7.1% from 2023 to 2032.

The rising consumer awareness of the health benefits associated with herbal dietary supplements, along with a growing preference for natural and plant-based wellness solutions, is expected to be a key driver of market growth over the forecast period from 2023 to 2032. However, concerns regarding product quality and safety, combined with a lack of stringent regulatory frameworks, may hinder market expansion to some extent.

On the other hand, the increasing incorporation of herbal supplements and complementary & alternative medicine (CAM) into mainstream healthcare, coupled with the growing demand for minimally processed foods enriched with functional benefits, is anticipated to create lucrative growth opportunities for the herbal dietary supplement market in the years ahead.
