San Francisco-based art gallery, announces the launch of its digital platform featuring an international collection acquired over 35 years of global travel. The gallery, founded by Vinit and Vidhi Verma, showcases artworks from over 25 countries with innovative discovery features including a "Surprise Me" button and "Wandering Art" interactive map that connects each piece to its country of origin.

The collection spans from contemporary art and antique silver to historical artifacts and cultural objects, emphasizing provenance and emotional resonance over investment value. Notable works include Daniel Allen Cohen's Science of Art series featuring witty periodic tables of wine and chocolate, Prabin Badhia's expressionist portraits, and Roberto de Fortino's "Tango Argentina." The gallery also features a 250-pound ceramic recreation of Rembrandt's Night Watch, Hungarian pottery jugs, Japanese cast iron teapots, and a New Zealand Maori Warrior figure. Each artwork comes with documented stories of discovery, reflecting the founders' philosophy that meaningful connections between art and collectors drive acquisition rather than market trends.

The gallery's digital platform features unique discovery tools designed to democratize art collecting, moving beyond traditional art world gatekeeping. The "Surprise Me" function allows spontaneous exploration based on the principle that artworks either speak to viewers within seconds or they won't connect at all. The interactive "Wandering Art" map geographically traces the collection's global origins, from European paintings to South American sculptures and African artifacts.

"Each piece carries its own story of discovery and cultural significance, creating authentic connections between collectors and artworks that bring joy to their daily lives," said Vinit Verma, founder of Canvas & Bronze.

Canvas & Bronze serves a diverse clientele ranging from first-time art buyers to established collectors seeking unique pieces beyond conventional gallery offerings.
