“Many homeowners in the area are seeking ways to preserve architectural charm while adapting their homes to meet modern living requirements,” said Director Dion Seminara. “The balance between old and new is a common request.”

With experience navigating Hawthorne's planning context and character overlays, dion seminara architecture has contributed to several local renovations that reflect a blend of technical expertise and contextual sensitivity. The firm emphasises early-stage planning, feasibility consultations, and a collaborative design process to help homeowners work confidently within heritage constraints.

Hawthorne's proximity to the Brisbane River, its established streetscapes, and mix of post-war and pre-war housing styles make it a standout suburb for renovation-led value growth. As more residents choose to renovate rather than rebuild, the suburb continues to evolve while retaining its unique character.
