I wrote these songs to uplift musicians facing grief. They're healing letters of musical medicine.”

World-renowned songwriter Martin Page, celebrated for iconic hits like “We Built This City” (Starship), “These Dreams” (Heart), “King of Wishful Thinking” (Go West), “Fallen Angel” (Robbie Robertson), and “In the House of Stone and Light,” released his transformative album "The First And Last Freedom" on June 2, 2025. Born from a deeply personal mission to uplift a dear friend battling terminal illness, this 11-track masterpiece is resonating with listeners worldwide, earning praise for its healing power and emotional depth.

Crafted in Page's Encino studio, "The First And Last Freedom" explores themes of resilience, courage, and finding balance in a fast-paced world. The album blends soulful vocals, vibrant rhythms, and poignant lyrics, creating an immersive musical and spiritual journey. Self-produced with Page's signature atmospheric layers, it features stellar guest performances from guitarists Ray Parker Jr., Bill Dillon, Neil Taylor, and Jack Hues (Wang Chung), alongside P.J. Moore (The Blue Nile) on keyboards.

Standout tracks include:

“Courage”: The lead single, earning acclaim from music press and peers for its uplifting message.

“Simplicity”: A reflective anthem that soothes the soul.

“Little Bird”: A funky, joyful jam radiating positivity.

“Abraham”: A hauntingly beautiful hymn of hope.

"I wrote these songs to uplift my fellow musicians facing grief and loss. They're healing letters of musical medicine," says Page. The album's creation became a cathartic process, not only for Page but also for the collaborating artists, who found solace in its melodies during personal challenges.

Page's storied career spans decades, with chart-topping anthems and soulful ballads that have shaped pop and rock music. His songwriting credits include collaborations with icons like Barbra Streisand, Earth, Wind & Fire, Kim Carnes, Neil Diamond, Chaka Khan, Robbie Robertson, Tom Jones, Paul Young, Go West, and Josh Groban.
