

PBS Travel TV Series Premieres as Host Michelle Valentine Celebrates 8-Year Wedding Anniversary

Michelle Valentine shares her real-life love story—and invites viewers to join her new PBS travel series premiering June 30.

APOLLO BEACH, FL, UNITED STATES, July 2, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- As if one celebration weren't enough, love is truly in the air for travel TV host and producer Michelle Valentine and her husband, Lawrence, Director of the series Love Eat Travel with Michelle Valentine. The couple is celebrating their 8-year wedding anniversary on the same day their long-anticipated television series begins airing on PBS member stations across the country.

Set to roll out gradually beginning June 30, 2025, Love Eat Travel with Michelle Valentine invites viewers on a flavorful, cultural journey through scenic U.S. destinations—hosted by Valentine herself and produced by the husbandand-wife duo. The show will air for the next three years on public television, with many repeat broadcasts.

In an unbelievable twist of timing, PBS programmers have scheduled the series to begin airing right as the couple reaches their anniversary milestone. Michelle and Lawrence are marking the occasion with an elegant champagne dinner at their Florida home—followed by watching the premiere together, of course.

"Out of 365 days in a year, it's unbelievable that the show is launching the same day as our wedding anniversary," said Valentine. "It feels like a divine little wink from the universe. We built this series together, and now we get to celebrate both our love and our latest creation on the same night."

The couple's love story began 11 years ago. After dating long-distance for two years, Lawrence proposed to Michelle during a Valentine's Day trip at Disney World in Orlando—an engagement that sparked a new chapter of love, collaboration, and creative adventures.

A special wedding photo of the couple and their helicopter travel adventure is being shared alongside this announcement as a nod to the love that made this production partnership possible.
