What About The Catalyst That Propels This Bradykinesia Market Growth? Fueling the growth of the bradykinesia market in the coming years is the increasing prevalence of neurological disorders. These are medical conditions that influence the brain, spinal cord, or nerves, leading to disruptions in movement, sensation, cognition, or other bodily functions. An aging global population and the consequential rise in age-related brain changes contribute toward an elevated risk of nervous system conditions. This rise in the number of neurological disorders is fueling the demand for bradykinesia treatment, as many of these conditions cause slow or reduced movement.
