CISO Global Founding Partner, Greg Sullivan

Technology Partners, Inc. (TPI) delivers lasting success through personalized executive coaching, strategic leadership development, and succession planning. With Sullivan's addition, the firm enhances its ability to support CIOs, CISOs, and technology leaders facing today's complex digital risk landscape.

"Through personalized coaching, we enhance leaders' effectiveness, improve decision-making, and drive growth," said Kath Marston, Executive Director Leadership Development Practice at Technology Partner, Inc. "Greg's high profile and in-depth cybersecurity and information technology experience at every organizational level will help our customers unlock leadership potential and prepare for transitions while minimizing disruption for sustained success."

Sullivan is a Founding Partner of CISO Global and a respected voice in cybersecurity and technology risk management. He advises enterprises on regulatory compliance and risk-based security strategies, combining technical depth with operational insight. His leadership experience includes serving as Senior Vice President and Global Chief Information Officer at Carnival Corporation, as well as CEO and CTO roles at Global Velocity. He holds a bachelor's degree in Systems Science & Mathematics from Washington University in St. Louis and is a Certified Information Systems Security Professional (CISSP).

"I'm excited to join with TPI and collaborate on developing next-generation technology leaders," said Sullivan. "Cybersecurity is no longer just a technical issue; it's a core business risk. I look forward to helping executives evolve their leadership approach and build stronger, more secure organizations."

This collaboration between TPI and Sullivan marks a strategic alignment of leadership development and cybersecurity risk awareness, key pillars for driving growth and resilience in today's dynamic business environment.
