and CEO of MYdys*

MYdys is a reading support app that helps children, teens, and adults with dyslexia read printed materials more easily. Using a smartphone, users can take a photo of any text, like a classroom worksheet or a restaurant menu, and instantly adapt it to their reading needs.

“Accessibility isn't optional—it's foundational to real learning,” said Frédéric Sudraud, founder and CEO of MYdys. “This recognition reflects the work we've done to make MYdys a daily tool for students who think and read differently.”

Designed for Real Needs in Real Classrooms

Built by the accessibility experts at FACIL'iti, the MYdys app includes features backed by scientific research on dyslexia and visual processing.

Users can:

- Adjust font, size, and line spacing
- Color-code confusing letters like “b” and “d”
- Change contrast or background color
- Listen to the text read aloud
- Translate into over 70 languages

Teachers and parents say it helps students gain confidence and independence, without waiting for classroom accommodations.

Free to Start, Easy to Use

MYdys is free for anyone to download and try on iOS and Android. No login, credit card, or diagnosis required. Just pull up the app, snap a picture, and read it your way.

Educators can also request school or district-level access by contacting MYdys at support@mydys.app.
