

Stinson Acquires Arc-Com, Uniting Two Legacy Brands to Better Serve the Commercial Design Community

This marks a pivotal moment in the industry as family-founded businesses with decades of design leadership come together to form an industry powerhouse.

ROCHESTER HILLS, MI, UNITED STATES, July 9, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Stinson, a leading provider of high-performance textiles for commercial interiors, is proud to announce the acquisition of Arc-Com, a design-driven textile and wallcovering company based in Orangeburg, New York. This marks a pivotal moment in the industry as two well-respected, family-founded and operated businesses with decades of design leadership come together to form an industry powerhouse.

“We are thrilled to welcome the Arc-Com team into the Stinson family. This is a meaningful alignment of two brands that share a dedication to culture, exceptional design, and high-touch service.”

Keith Stinson, President of Stinson

In 2020, Stinson acquired Anzea, broadening its aesthetic reach and market relevance, offering bold, fashion-forward textiles with a fresh perspective. This newest acquisition unites all three brands Stinson, Anzea, and now Arc-Com. Effective immediately, customers can collaborate with their textile sales professionals to sample or purchase products from across the three portfolios. This integration offers designers and specifiers a dramatically expanded library of textile and surface solutions, all delivered with the service and trusted quality clients have come to expect.

Founded in 1952, Stinson has built a reputation for excellence through a commitment to innovative design and technology, rigorous performance standards, and best-in-class customer service. The addition of Arc-Com, founded in 1972, further reinforces this foundation with a rich portfolio of performance-driven textiles and a growing wallcovering category—an area of opportunity Stinson is excited to support and elevate over time.

“We are thrilled to welcome the Arc-Com team into the Stinson family,” said Keith Stinson, President of Stinson. “This is a meaningful alignment of two brands that share a dedication to culture, exceptional design, and high-touch service. Together, we are stronger, more agile, and ready to deliver unmatched value to our customers.”

"Joining forces with Stinson is a tremendous opportunity for our brand and our customers," added Marc Layne, President of Arc-Com. "We've admired their design leadership and customer-first culture for years. As fellow family businesses, we share a commitment to building lasting relationships with our many hard-working team members who strive to deliver best-in-class products to our design community."

The integration of these design brands will be carried out thoughtfully to ensure a seamless transition for employees, customers, and industry partners. In aligning operations, Stinson, Anzea, and Arc-Com will continue to honor their distinct voices while operating as one unified team representing three brands. With a dedicated focus on quality, service, and smart, multi-market product development, the new collective offers clients more options, deeper expertise, and an easier path to specifying great design.
