"For these young musicians to perform on this historic stage represents not only personal achievement but also recognition of the caliber of music education available in our community." said Dr. Bella Eugenia Oster, Principal and Professor of Piano Performance at EAMA.

Under Dr. Oster's guidance, the students have developed skills that allow them to tackle repertoire typically reserved for conservatory-level musicians. Dr. Oster's five decades of experience in music education have established EAMA as an institution where students regularly advance to perform at world famous venues including Carnegie Hall (NY), Royal Albert Concert Hall (UK), Musikverein (Austria), Bastille Opera House (France), Parco della Musica (Italy), numerous others and now Teatro Colón (Argentina).

The students serve as cultural ambassadors, representing the Washington metropolitan area on an international stage while demonstrating the quality of education and opportunity available through EAMA.
