While the company has grown, earned national recognition, and expanded its offerings, one thing has never changed: Hodgson's commitment to helping clients navigate technology with clarity and confidence. “Our clients don't just need tech support—they need a strategic partner,” said Karla Zehnder, CEO of Hodgson

Consulting. “We've built our business around that belief, and after 25 years, our purpose remains the same: to deliver secure, innovative IT that clears the path for business success.”

A Legacy of Results and Relationships

What started in a basement office has grown into a multi-award-winning IT firm serving businesses nationwide. Yet Hodgson Consulting has remained grounded in what matters most: serving people—not just solving tickets. The firm's proactive service model, strong cybersecurity focus, and tailored consulting approach have helped hundreds of organizations prevent costly downtime, stay compliant, and scale with confidence.

Clients often turn to Hodgson when:

- IT systems are holding back operational efficiency
- Compliance requirements have become overwhelming
- Security risks are too great for internal teams to manage alone

And what they find is not just support—but clarity, protection, and momentum.

“We’ve earned our clients’ trust by being responsive, transparent, and committed to their goals,” added Robert Zehnder, President of Hodgson Consulting. “That trust is everything to us—and it’s what has fueled our growth over the past 25 years.”

Looking Ahead: More Than Tech. It's Trust.

As Hodgson Consulting celebrates this milestone, the company is doubling down on its commitment to client success by pursuing additional certifications, expanding its risk-focused service offerings, and continuing to invest in expert talent.

“This milestone isn’t just about looking back,” said Karla Zehnder. “It’s about what comes next—and how we can continue helping our clients thrive, one smart decision at a time.”
