The Eloise ensemble represents an avant-garde interpretation of classic evening wear, featuring dramatic architectural elements and sophisticated craftsmanship. The three-piece construction showcases a fly-away split front and flounced bodice that transitions seamlessly into a sophisticated column skirt, elevated by proprietary metallic threadwork embroidery.

"The Eloise ensemble embodies our commitment to creating pieces that make powerful statements," says Tess Mann, founder and creative director. "The dramatic décolletage and statement puffy sleeves create an unforgettable silhouette, while the integrated structure ensures both comfort and confidence for any red carpet moment."

The ensemble's construction represents over 200 hours of focused garment construction, featuring integrated bra cups, professional drill-and-boning structure, and custom metallic thread embroidery with delicate beadwork accents. The sophisticated column skirt includes a detachable embroidered belt, offering versatility within the dramatic silhouette.

Paloma Cinco, an accomplished actress and business entrepreneur from Guadalajara, has completed acting studies at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts and City Academy in London. She speaks fluent Spanish, English, and German, and is currently developing projects through Espectro MX Films alongside her brother Cristo Fernández.

This feature on People magazine continues Tess Mann Atelier's growing presence in celebrity styling and entertainment media coverage. The brand's unique approach to evening wear, combining avant-garde design elements with traditional couture techniques, continues to attract attention from stylists and celebrities seeking distinctive statements for Hollywood's most prestigious events.
