Why Portugal Still Holds a Strategic Edge

Even if the proposed extension of the citizenship timeline from 5 to 10 years becomes law, Portugal remains the only EU country where investors can apply for citizenship without full-time relocation or mandatory donations. The country offers an unparalleled path to EU citizenship through real, strategic investment.

Under the proposed changes, Golden Visa holders would still be able to:

-Maintain their investment for 5 years

-Apply for permanent residency in year 5 and exit their investment

-Maintain residency with minimal physical presence (7 days/year)

Apply for citizenship in year 10 without relocation

This long-term flexibility, combined with EU access and quality of life, continues to place Portugal at the top of investor priorities.

Investor sentiment is also being shaped by rising global instability and shifting political climates. Many high-net-worth individuals are actively seeking second residency and citizenship options as a safeguard.

"Many of our clients are looking at Portugal as a long-term safety net, especially as political tensions increase in their home countries," added Coskun.

While Portugal remains the most strategic destination, Greece and Italy also continue to attract interest, particularly from lifestyle-driven investors. Greece's real estate pathway and Italy's fast-track startup model offer viable alternatives for different profiles.
