Other recent awards include the Internet Telephony Product of the Year, also given to the One Pipe Multi-Connect solution; and a parallel honor for the company's Cloud Connect solution awarded by Cloud Computing magazine. These wins reflect Massive Networks' commitment to elevating the role of carriers in the IT supply chain, replacing outdated models with a more reliable, partner-aligned approach that creates value for MSPs and VARs. Publisher TMCNet is one of the leading online news media for the telecom, cloud, and IT spaces.

One Pipe Multi-Connect gives MSPs greater control over the configuration, accessibility, and performance of their clients' connectivity through the delivery of a scalable, bespoke, and optimized infrastructure. The company's model has been created to improve the carrier experience in the channel, incorporating elements such as concierge-level support, dedicated connectivity experts, fully managed end-to-end circuits and specialized configurations like Layer 2 network isolation for greater security, or multi-cloud linking to enhance performance.

"Massive Networks is changing how telecom providers and MSPs align their goals in the channel, creating a mutually beneficial partnership structure based on accountability, performance, and simplicity. We're not just handing MSPs another product or circuit to resell, we're determined to give them and their customers a competitive edge," said Kevin Flake, the organization's CEO. "This award validates our ongoing strategy to align with channel partner needs. When providers give those partners a solution that genuinely performs, and back it up with a dedicated team to also support end-users, it creates a critical alignment between supplier and partner that results in positive outcomes for all parties involved."

"We're thrilled to once again recognize Massive Networks for its ingenuity and commitment to the MSP marketplace, empowering MSPs to provide more consistent experiences and richer functionality of bandwidth," said Rich Tehrani, CEO of TMC. "Each 2025 MSP Today Product of the Year winner demonstrated exceptional collaboration with their partners, aligning innovative products with customer needs to deliver outstanding experiences and real business value."
