With students hailing from 46 U.S. states and representing over 40 countries of origin, LAIA's reach and cultural diversity stand as a testament to its mission: Unity. Diversity. Advocacy.

"This milestone isn't just about numbers, it's about lives changed," said Greg McKewen, Founder and Executive Director of LAIA. "We are proud to have built a movement of ethical, community-based support that helps immigrants navigate complex documentation processes with care and compliance."

Empowering Change Without Legal Advice

In strict accordance with California's Business and Professions Code Sections 22440–22449, LAIA's training programs teach participants how to ethically assist immigrants by:

- Preparing and organizing immigration forms under client instruction
- Translating documents and responses
- Helping clients navigate the non-legal side of USCIS form submission
- Referring to licensed attorneys when legal guidance is needed

LAIA-trained individuals are not attorneys and do not provide legal advice. Instead, they represent a growing community of trained document preparers who are transforming immigrant support services, without crossing legal boundaries.

A Growing Movement of Grassroots Advocates

Through accessible online training, live instruction, and a vibrant member community, LAIA equips everyday individuals, from notaries to tax preparers, to build businesses that support immigrants while upholding the highest standards of ethical practice.

"It's about helping people serve their neighbors while following the law," added McKewen. "When we empower community members with the right tools, knowledge, and training, we create ripples of positive change across entire families and neighborhoods."
