The design-build model is a streamlined approach in residential custom home building and remodeling where a single entity, like Metro Design Build Group, handles both the design and construction phases of a project. This collaborative method ensures seamless communication, consistent quality, and a unified vision between the homeowner, designers, and the build team from start to finish.

“Our clients benefit from a more efficient process, accurate budgeting, and timely project completion,” states George Kall, President of Metro Design Build Group. “With design-build, there’s no need to juggle multiple contractors because the majority of them are all under one roof. This makes the entire experience more enjoyable and less stressful for the homeowner. We changed our name to better represent our commitment to this cohesive and highly collaborative process.”
