Joe Gorup, CEO, CourseAvenue

leader in accessible digital learning for government, today officially launched www.Gov.Education—an online educational initiative designed to increase public access to proposed and finalized federal regulations through interactive, accessible courseware.

“www.Gov.Education was born from the challenge of turning dense and unreadable federal regulatory text into clear, engaging learning experiences,” said Joe Gorup, CEO of CourseAvenue.com. “We aim to foster civic literacy and government transparency by providing a centralized platform where federal employees, agency staff, industry stakeholders, and the public at large can access user-friendly courseware that explains complex federal and state rulemaking, legislation, and policy in simple, easy-to-use language.”

Gov.Education offers a centralized, accessible, and continually updated digital learning platform that equips a broad range of learners—federal, state, local officials, contractors, nonprofits, educational institutions, and the general public—with structured training on federal regulations, legislative changes, and policy compliance.

Gov.Education is powered by CourseAvenue.com, a firm renowned for integrating Section 508 and WCAG accessibility into all its e-learning tools, eliminating the need for retroactive (and expensive) remediation.

Origins, Fast Facts, and Institutional Backing

*Gov.Education hosts hundreds of federally curated, off-the-shelf interactive courses, covering statutes, legislation, regulatory best practices, and policy updates.

*SCORM compliant: CourseAvenue's proprietary Studio and Deliver platforms enable creation of SCORM-compliant, trackable modules that integrate seamlessly with major learning management systems (LMS).

*Daily Course Expansion: New courses are created daily, this ensures new Gov.Education modules reflect the latest developments in federal regulation.

*Accessibility & Customizability: Every course created on Gov.Education meets Section 508/WCAG standards and can be tailored to organization-specific needs via drag-and-drop modularity.

CourseAvenue's emphasis on embedded accessibility led to early adoption by government agencies. The USDA has published over 2,000 courses using the platform.

A recent white paper explains skill, cost, and time barriers to accessible e-learning content production at scale, presents methodology to democratize creation and delivery.
