TransAct, a leading provider of operational and compliance software for the education sector, announced today that three US school districts have been awarded its "Accelerating Impact Grant" for At-Risk Student Support. This grant provides each district with three years of free access to TransAct's Student Support Tracker software and related support and services. The three awardees of the grant are:

- Plumas Unified School District (California)
- Crossroads Charter Schools (Missouri)

- Raleigh County Schools (West Virginia)

We created this grant to equip dedicated teams with the tools they need to track, document, and respond more efficiently. Student Support Tracker helps make that work more sustainable and effective.”

Student Support Tracker provides school staff members working with McKinney-Vento and other special student populations with a single, access-controlled digital case management tool for improving internal and external service coordination, accelerating the delivery of student resources, and providing real-time insights to support greater student success.

The grant was launched in early 2025 to enhance the ability of selected districts to identify, support, and empower at-risk student populations. Each awardee was chosen based on their demonstrated need and dedication to supporting at-risk students.

Create dashboards that are updated with real-time information about how students are being served.

"We're looking forward to utilizing Student Support Tracker as it will not only enhance our ability to identify and communicate about student needs across all sites, but also strengthen how we support the families we serve," said Wendi James, Homeless and Migrant Education at Plumas Unified School District.

"We are constantly collaborating with different groups and agencies to support at-risk students. Student Support Tracker will help improve how we monitor significant changes such as address and status updates, track supports provided to families, generate reports, and improve coordination across staff with transparency," said Nicki Bates, Exceptional Learners Director at Crossroads Charter Schools.

"School districts are working tirelessly to meet the growing needs of at-risk students while also navigating complex compliance requirements," said Nate Brogan, CEO at TransAct. "We created this grant to equip dedicated teams with the tools they need to track, document, and respond more efficiently. Student Support Tracker helps make that work more sustainable and effective."
