Latest Key Developments:

In 2025, Arla Foods Ingredients entered into a contract manufacturing partnership with Valley Queen, enhancing its capacity to meet the rising U.S. demand for protein-fortified dairy products. Nutrilac ProteinBoost is set to begin production at Valley Queen's facility in Milbank,

South Dakota during the winter of 2025/2026, once the necessary specialized equipment has been installed.

In 2024, Lassonde Industries Inc. acquired Summer Garden Food Manufacturing for US$235 million. Based in Boardman, Ohio, Summer Garden is known for producing premium sauces and condiments under popular brands like Gia Russa, Little Italy in the Bronx, and G Hughes. The acquisition supports Lassonde’s strategy to diversify its offerings and expand its footprint in the high-acid, shelf-stable food segment, responding to growing consumer interest in premium food products.

Market Drivers and Opportunities

Key factors fueling market growth include:

Outsourcing for Flexibility & Focus: Food brands are outsourcing production to focus on core competencies such as branding and innovation while scaling faster.

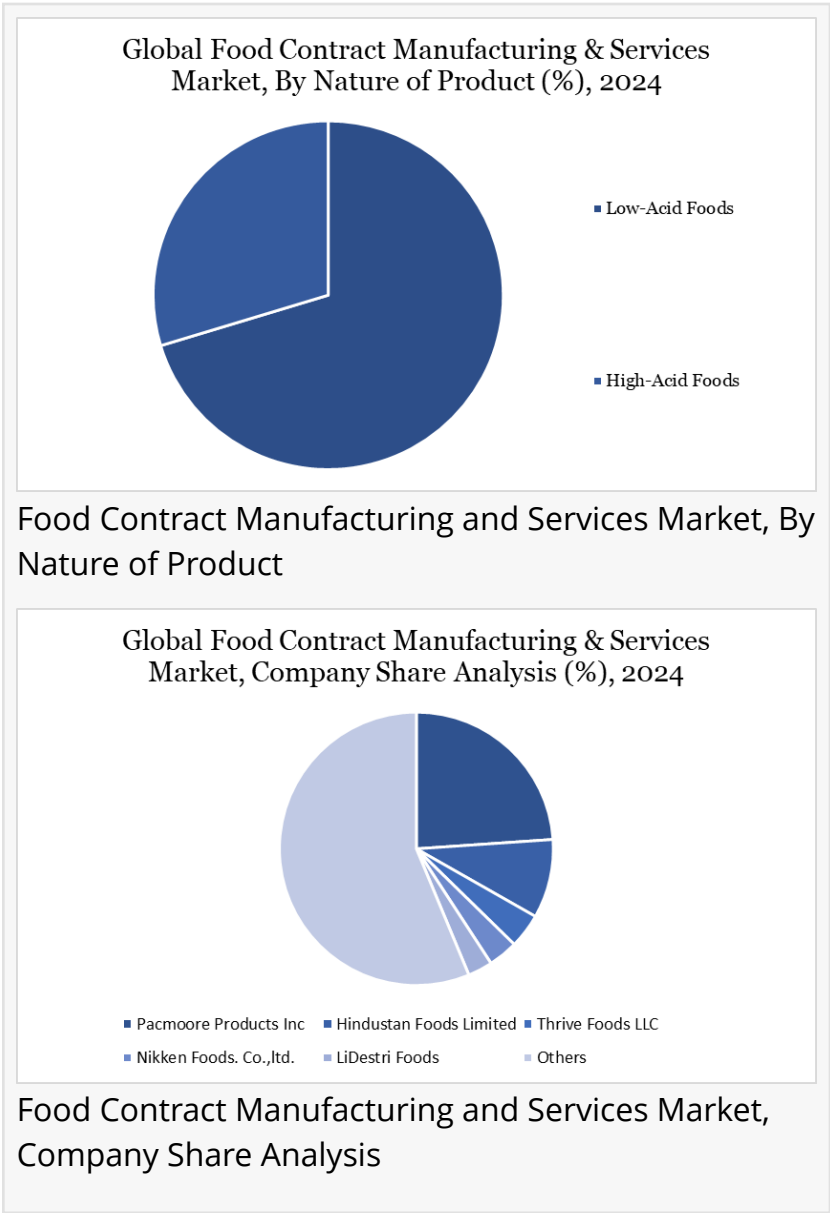

Surging Demand for Functional & Health Foods: The rise in health-conscious consumers is increasing demand for nutritional and organic products, opening up new opportunities for contract manufacturers.

Cost-Efficient Manufacturing & Technology Access: Contract manufacturers offer advanced capabilities, including automation, robotics, and cleanroom technology, without large capital investment from the client.

Customization & Rapid Product Development: Companies seek quick turnarounds and customization across flavors, packaging, and formulations—benefits provided efficiently by contract manufacturing partners.

Geographical Market Share

North America holds a major share due to a well-established food processing industry, high labor costs driving outsourcing, and increased demand for organic and plant-based products.

Europe follows closely, driven by strict food safety regulations and growing demand for premium and private-label products.

Asia-Pacific is emerging as the fastest-growing region, supported by a booming middle class, changing diets, and expanding contract manufacturing infrastructure in countries like China, India, and Southeast Asia.
