Infotech today announced a formal partnership with personal-branding firm Ohh My Brand and Webflowfocused design studio Blushush. This strategic alliance establishes an integrated project framework that merges software engineering, web design, and brand strategy into one cohesive, streamlined process. Each organization will retain its independent brand identity and existing organizational structure, while collaborating seamlessly and effectively on selected projects to ensure maximum efficiency and value.

We meticulously developed a shared roadmap that tightly integrates our technical development efforts with corresponding design assets and strategic content plans.”

Joint operations officially commenced on 1 July 2025, following extensive strategic discussions, workshops, and collaborative meetings conducted across London, India, and New York. In preparation for this alliance, the three companies diligently worked to establish a unified project timeline, harmonized documentation procedures, and developed a centralized client portal. The primary objective of this approach is to streamline and simplify client communications and enhance overall project management, enabling clients to enjoy a single, consistent point of contact throughout every phase—from initial planning and strategy to final launch and ongoing support. This method aims to significantly reduce common delays and friction points that typically arise when multiple independent vendors are involved in the delivery of complex digital projects.

“We meticulously developed a shared roadmap that tightly integrates our technical development efforts with corresponding design assets and strategic content plans," explained Mohit Ramani, CEO of Empyreal Infotech. "By aligning engineering closely with design and narrative storytelling, we can deliver more robust, polished, and impactful products to our clients in significantly reduced timelines."

Bhavik Sarkhedi, Founder of Ohh My Brand, remarked, "Effective branding transcends mere messaging; it must fundamentally shape and guide the functionality and overall user experience of digital platforms. This partnership ensures that brand coherence is embedded deeply into the architecture and functionality of every platform right from the inception of each project."

Sahil Gandhi, Co-Founder of Blushush, highlighted, "Webflow has revolutionized how design and development work together, enabling simultaneous collaboration. Our partnership builds upon and significantly expands this integration by including branding strategy and backend engineering processes, ensuring each stage of a project is designed to effortlessly build upon and complement the previous one."

Currently, the partnership has initiated six diverse pilot projects across sectors such as fintech, e-commerce, and health-tech. These initial collaborations will be meticulously evaluated based on critical metrics such as time to launch, client satisfaction, user engagement, and the consistency and effectiveness of brand communication across various platforms and touchpoints. A comprehensive joint evaluation process is planned for the fourth quarter of 2025, and insights gained from these evaluations will be instrumental in guiding the partnership's future strategic initiatives, particularly in innovative areas such as AI-driven personalization, advanced analytics, and enterprise-level digital solutions.

Empyreal Infotech, headquartered in London, specializes in the development of cloud-native systems, sophisticated mobile applications, and comprehensive digital platforms for an extensive global client base. Ohh My Brand is renowned for developing compelling, clear, and impactful personal and corporate brand narratives that drive engagement and trust. Blushush is dedicated to creating highly responsive Webflow websites that prioritize intuitive user experiences, seamless interactions, and strategic alignment with business goals and objectives.
