“Rhombus Power is gratified to see President Trump's AI Action Plan sends a signal that the era of AI at the Pentagon and across the national security enterprise will be a defining legacy and a clear message that China will not outcompete us,” said Dr. Roy. “This Administration sees AI as an opportunity to make us safer and stronger, and the Action Plan is a bold step to supercharge innovation, remove regulatory barriers, and ensure our armed forces and intelligence professionals maintain a decisive technological advantage. Rhombus Power is proud to contribute to this vital national effort.”

Rhombus Power has been at the forefront of developing advanced AI -powered decision support solutions with applications ranging from resourcing to predictive, enhanced situational awareness for force protection and anti-fentanyl trafficking. The company's platforms are already transforming decision-making, delivering timely insights and operational superiority to those charged with protecting national interests.

Dr. Roy's invitation and participation in AI Action Day underscores Rhombus Power's critical role in supporting the Defense Department and other US agencies' efforts to advance U.S. leadership in AI-driven national security. The company remains committed to accelerating innovation in service of a stronger, more secure America.
