

KILLSTREAK — A Terrifying New Found Footage Horror Film From the Director of Money Plane — Premieres August 5

Killstreak, a found footage horror film from Money Plane director Andrew Lawrence, hits digital & cable VOD Aug 5 via Gravitas Ventures.

LOS ANGELES, CA, UNITED STATES, July 24, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Gravitas Ventures is proud to announce the release of KILLSTREAK, a chilling new entry in the found footage horror genre from director Andrew Lawrence (Money Plane), debuting August 5 on cable on demand, Apple TV, Prime Video, Vudu, Google Play, and many other platforms.

Alberto de la Cruz

Set in the high-stakes world of game streaming, KILLSTREAK follows a group of influencers who discover a mysterious retro-style horror game during a livestream—only to realize that playing it opens a door to a very real, very deadly curse. What begins as viral content quickly spirals into a waking nightmare.

The film features an all-star cast including Austin Mahone, pop sensation turned leading man; Kendall Vertes (Dance Moms); viral comedy icon TonioSkits; and singer, dancer, and influencer Montana Tucker. KILLSTREAK also marks the feature film debut of esports legend Justin Wong, a ten-time EVO champion, bringing authenticity and gravitas to the world of competitive gaming and streaming culture.

— Alberto de la Cruz, Writer of KILLSTREAK

Killstreak will be available starting August 5 via cable on demand and on all major digital platforms including Apple TV, Prime Video, Vudu, Google Play, and more.
