factors such as prevention of hearing impairment, alleviation of discomfort and pain, treatment of tinnitus, management of dizziness and vertigo, and prevention of infections.

The earwax removal market size is predicted to witness strong growth in the years ahead. It is expected to expand to $2.54 billion in 2029 at a compound annual growth rate CAGR of 6.1%. The growth in the forecast period can be largely credited to factors such as an aging population, growing awareness about the importance of proper ear care, integration of telehealth and remote diagnostics, and ongoing research in audiology and otolaryngology. Key trends in this period include the rise in technological innovations, increased adoption of automated ear cleaning devices, expansion of telehealth services, customization of earwax removal solutions, and growing emphasis on preventive ear care.
