Our local team provides fast, accurate, and fully compliant drug and alcohol testing that keeps Colorado’s roads and job sites safe.”

“With the FMCSA Clearinghouse rules tightening in late 2024, the opioid epidemic hitting our state hard in recent years, and cannabis use continuing to become mainstream, many DOT-regulated employers are under pressure to maintain compliance,” said Andrew Knox, Owner of PROCOM. “Our local team provides fast, accurate, and fully compliant drug and alcohol testing that keeps Colorado’s roads and job sites safe.”

Colorado Employers Face Complex Challenges with Cannabis Legalization and Federal Rules
Despite the legalization of recreational and medicinal marijuana in Colorado, DOT regulations prohibit use of THC for CDL drivers and other safety-sensitive employees. PROCOM has taken a leading role in educating employers across the state about the conflict between federal law and state cannabis laws, including how CBD products may still trigger violations under DOT testing guidelines.

“We help Colorado employers understand the risks and stay compliant,” Andrew added. “You can’t afford to gamble on misinformed policies when federal audits are on the line and personal injury lawyers are on every billboard you see.”
