FORT BRAGG, NC, UNITED STATES, July 29, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In the spirit of honor, service, and compassion, Axios Security Group and Axios Investigations Firm, two veteran-owned sister organizations, organized and led a large-scale community outreach event on Sunday, July 27, to provide essential aid to homeless veterans in the Fort Bragg region.

The Team of Volunteers

The initiative was created in direct response to a dangerous heatwave affecting much of the Southeast, where temperatures in the Carolinas have been exceeding 100°F. The Axios teams distributed tents, food, hygiene kits, and 48 cases of bottled water to vulnerable populations throughout the area, focusing particularly on those who have served in the military.

This was about more than supplies; it was about dignity, respect, and reminding our veterans they are seen, valued, and still part of this community.”

“This was more than just handing out supplies,” said Jereme Dozier, CEO of both Axios Security Group and Axios Investigations Firm. “This was about restoring dignity, offering respect, and showing up for those who once wore the uniform. These veterans are not forgotten; they are still part of this community, and they deserve to feel that.”

Both Axios entities, comprised of former Special

Operations veterans, law enforcement officers, and federal agents, mobilized their teams and resources in less than a week. The event showcased the unique ability of these organizations to respond to the community's quick needs with logistical efficiency and heart.

One of the event's key corporate supporters was Food Lion, which generously donated 48 cases of bottled water to aid in combating heat-related risks.

"We're proud to stand with Axios Security Group and Axios Investigations Firm in supporting our local heroes," said a Food Lion spokesperson. "Water might seem simple, but during a heatwave, it's a critical lifeline. We're grateful for the opportunity to help."

The volunteers, including many veterans themselves, worked side-by-side with Axios staff to offer not only supplies but encouragement, conversation, and presence. The event created an atmosphere of community and fellowship, offering emotional as well as physical support.

"It was incredibly humbling," said Marcus R., a volunteer and former Marine. "You see, these men and women are many, just like us, struggling quietly. They were warriors once, and they still are. A simple gesture, a shared meal, a bottle of cold water, it goes a long way."

The leadership at Axios made it clear this is only the beginning.

"We are committed to being present, not just during times of crisis," said Dozier. "Our mission at both Axios Security Group and Axios Investigations Firm is rooted in protection, service, and integrity. That includes standing up for the most vulnerable among us, especially those who have already given so much."
