With existing clinics across the Dallas–Fort Worth area and Houston, the new Austin location marks a strategic step in the brand's continued growth across Texas.

“We're not just here to offer treatments. We're here to empower people to feel their best, inside and out,” said DeWitt. “Austin has long been on our radar. It's a vibrant city that values wellness, self-care, and community. Our goal is to bring the InjectCo experience to a place that already prioritizes health and confidence.”

Patients can now book appointments for InjectCo's full range of nonsurgical aesthetic treatments, including Botox, dermal fillers, liquid BBL, microneedling, lip flips, and skin rejuvenation therapies.

Every treatment plan is customized, with a focus on achieving natural results through ethical, medically supervised techniques.

The Austin location also serves as an extension of InjectCo's educational mission.

Through the Texas Academy of Medical Aesthetics, also founded by DeWitt, the clinic will host hands-on training and shadowing opportunities for aspiring injectors. This dual-purpose model allows the clinic to serve both patients and the next generation of skilled providers.
