Visitors Health Insurance is a type of travel medical insurance designed to cover medical expenses for individuals visiting the United States from other countries. It provides coverage for unexpected illnesses or injuries that may occur during their stay in the US. While not mandatory, it is highly recommended due to the high cost of healthcare in the US.

Key aspects of Visitors Health Insurance:

Coverage Benefits: It typically covers doctor visits, hospital stays, prescription drugs, and emergency medical expenses. Some plans may also include coverage for medical evacuation and repatriation.

Premium Cost: The cost of visitors insurance varies depending on factors like age, coverage amount, and deductible, but can range from $20 to more than $200 per month.

Types of Plans: There are two main types of plans: Fixed Benefit plans, which have specific limits for each covered expense, and Comprehensive Benefit plans, which cover expenses up to the policy maximum.

Importance: The US healthcare system is expensive, and without insurance, visitors could face substantial medical bills.

Not for Routine Care: These plans primarily focus on unexpected medical needs and generally do not cover routine checkups, preventative care, or vaccinations.

Mandatory vs. Recommended: While not mandatory for tourists, it's strongly advised to have visitor insurance for peace of mind and financial protection.
