Dripping in gold, grit, and unapologetic attitude.

Marko Stout, known for his vibrant urban style and glossy, metallic artworks, will introduce a limited-edition capsule collection of wearable art pieces that draw directly from the bold aesthetic of his paintings and multimedia installations. The show marks the artist's first full-scale venture into fashion design and has already garnered attention from fashion editors, art collectors, and cultural critics alike.

Marko Stout blurs the line between art and fashion with unapologetic glamour—his runway debut is a vivid collision of gallery aesthetics and streetwise style.”

Vogue Magazine (July 2025)

The collection was developed in collaboration with rising fashion designer Tyeakia, combining couture craftsmanship with Stout's signature themes—urban glamour, industrial textures, and pop-cultural iconography. Each piece in the collection reflects elements from Stout's well-known visual language, including vivid color palettes, surreal patterns, and sleek metallic finishes. The line includes high-end women's apparel, accessories, and silk scarves, all presented as functional artworks.

“This launch represents the continuation of Marko Stout's vision to make contemporary art part of everyday life,” said a representative from Stout's studio. “Through this show, he is redefining the runway as a space where fine art and fashion collide—accessible yet exclusive, and always visually powerful.”

With works previously exhibited in major cities such as New York, Miami, and Los Angeles, and featured in publications including Vogue, Playboy, Newsweek, and Rolling Stone, Stout has established himself as a provocative and influential figure in the art world. His transition into fashion comes at a time when cross-disciplinary collaboration is reshaping both creative and commercial landscapes.

The September 9th show is anticipated to draw an elite audience of fashion buyers, stylists, gallerists, influencers, and press. The venue will feature a custom-designed runway environment, fusing Stout’s visual motifs with immersive lighting and sound. Select pieces from the collection will be available for pre-order following the event, with a limited production run to preserve exclusivity.
