There is a growing recognition of art as an effective form of stress relief and self-expression. Art therapy is being increasingly used in clinical settings, as well as in personal routines, contributing to the growing demand for accessible, therapeutic art supplies.

The growing interest in DIY projects, fueled by social media platforms such as Pinterest and YouTube, has significantly boosted the demand for art supplies. Consumers are increasingly engaging in home crafts, painting, scrapbooking, and other artistic activities, driving sales of materials such as paints, brushes, and paper. Moreover, art therapy has gained widespread recognition for its mental health benefits, which has created a steady demand for art supplies in clinical and recreational settings. As individuals seek ways to reduce stress, manage anxiety, and enhance well-being, art supplies are being used in therapeutic environments such as hospitals, schools, and community centers. Furthermore, with rising consumer awareness of environmental issues, there is a significant opportunity for companies to innovate and provide eco-friendly art supplies.

The art supplies market is segmented into product type, end user, distribution channel, and region. By product type, the market is divided into painting supplies, drawing supplies, craft supplies, and others. By end user, the market is classified into household, professional artists, institutions, commercial, and others. As per distribution channel, the market is bifurcated into online, and offline. By region, the market is analyzed across North America, Europe, Asia-Pacific, LAMEA.

The painting supplies segment held the major share of the market share in 2023.

By product type, the painting supplies segment held the major share of the market share in 2023, accounting for more than two-third of the global art supplies market and is estimated to maintain its leadership status throughout the forecast period. The growing trend of DIY art projects and the popularity of online platforms highlighting artistic endeavors are major contributors. In particular, watercolor, oil, and acrylic paints continue to be essential products for both amateurs and seasoned artists. Educational institutions, art schools, and therapy centers also form key drivers, as painting is commonly integrated into curriculums and used in art therapy.

However, the craft supplies segment is projected to manifest the highest CAGR of 5.1% from 2024 to 2035. Social media platforms such as Pinterest, YouTube, and Instagram have fostered a global crafting community, inspiring a surge in crafting activities such as scrapbooking, knitting, and home décor projects.

The professional artists segment held the major share of the market share in 2023.

By end user, the professional artists segment held the major share of the market in 2023, accounting for more than one-fifth of the global art supplies market and is estimated to maintain its leadership status throughout the forecast period. Professional artists require superior materials for their artwork, whether for painting, drawing, or mixed media. The demand for premium brushes, paints, canvases, and specialty papers remains steady as these materials are critical for creating fine art. In addition, the growing recognition of art as an investment, with many people collecting artworks, increases the value of professional artistry, thereby driving the need for superior supplies.

However, the household users' segment is projected to manifest the highest CAGR of 4.9% from 2024 to 2035. The rise of affordable art supplies has made it easier for households to start engaging in activities such as painting, drawing, and crafting. In addition, the growth of art-based mental health practices, such as art therapy, has contributed to this segment.

The offline segment held the major share of the market share in 2023.

By distribution channel, the offline segment held the major share of the market in 2023, accounting for more than half of the global art supplies market and is estimated to maintain its leadership status throughout the forecast period. Brick-and-mortar stores provide personalized customer service, enabling shoppers to receive expert advice on the right supplies for their needs. Art supply stores and larger retail chains that stock art materials are experiencing growth, driven by the increasing interest in art as a hobby. In addition, consumers who are new to art or unsure of what supplies to buy often seek in-person guidance from staff. Art stores frequently host workshops, demonstrations, and events, making shopping for art supplies an engaging experience.

However, the online segment is projected to manifest the highest CAGR of 5.2% from 2024 to 2035. The convenience of shopping from home and the broader range of products available online makes it the preferred choice for many consumers. E-commerce giants such as Amazon, as well as specialized art supply websites, offer vast selections and competitive pricing, enabling consumers to access high-quality art materials from around the world.
