

Chaunte Hall featured on Trudy Jacobson's Great American Warriors

SAN ANTONIO, TX, UNITED STATES, August 9, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Chaunte Hall was featured on the Trudy Jacobson's Great American Warrior, a series created to tell the stories of patriotic American women.

From the front lines of military service to the heart of her local community, Chaunte Hall has spent her life living out one unwavering principle: serve the next generation.

A decorated veteran, nonprofit founder, and public servant, Hall is the Chief of Community Engagement at Port San Antonio, where she works just across the street from the place it all began at Lackland Air Force Base. It was there, at the age of 17, that she took the oath to serve in the United States Air Force, having been recruited by her own father.

Through her episode, Hall states "It's the core of who we are," and later says of her military upbringing. Raised in a dual-service household, Hall's life was built on the values of discipline, sacrifice, and service. That commitment only deepened after the attacks of September 11, which forced her to pause her education and begin deployments. But where others might have stopped, Hall pushed forward.

It is explained in the episode that she was stationed in Japan, and pursued distance education from Liberty University. From there, she would go on to earn a Master of Public Administration in government policy, a doctorate in business administration, and multiple professional certifications. Her achievements, however, are not about prestige.

"I'm an example of lifelong learning," she said. "The next generation needs to see that anything is possible if you keep trying."

Today, Hall excels as a community leader and bridge builder. In addition to her role at Port San Antonio, she is the founder and CEO of Centurion Military Alliance, a nonprofit organization focused on veteran transition and career success, and co-founder of the Airman Heritage Group, which preserves the history and honor of those who have served.

Her mission is clear: serve with purpose, teach by example, and never stop lifting others.

"Once we start looking in the mirror and we only see ourselves, we're done," Hall said. "It's about reaching forward to build what's next."
