Hollywood Disrupted: The Knock is More Than a Movie—It's a Profit Machine

Horror is Hollywood's most lucrative secret weapon. With relatively low production costs and explosive box office returns, horror films have consistently outperformed their budgets, boasting ROI figures that routinely dwarf big-budget blockbusters. The Purge (budget: $3M, box office: $89M), Paranormal Activity (budget: $15K, box office: $193M), and Get Out (budget: $4.5M, box office: $255M) prove one thing: horror sells. In 2023 alone, horror films generated over $1.1 billion in domestic box office revenue, and the genre's global market is expected to exceed $30 billion by 2027.

The Knock is engineered to tap directly into this profit pipeline. With viral social engagement, a built-in audience, and an ecosystem of ancillary products, Providence is setting a new bar for revenue potential—and doing it on its own terms.
