

AIM Highlights Rising Demand for Motorized Window Treatments in Smart Homes

ENGLEWOOD, CO, UNITED STATES,
September 8, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/

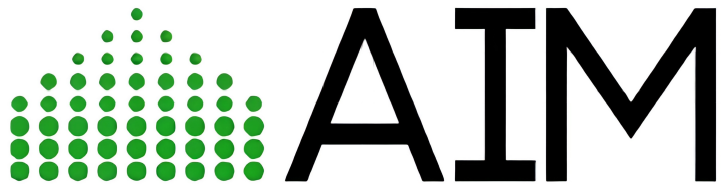

-- As smart home technology becomes more accessible and integrated into daily life, homeowners are increasingly looking for ways to extend automation into all corners of their living spaces.

AIM, a Colorado-based window treatment company known for its in-home design consultations, is seeing a sharp increase in demand for motorized window treatments across its service areas.

Motorized shades and blinds offer homeowners the ability to control natural light, privacy, and energy efficiency with the touch of a button. Whether managed through remote control, smartphone app, or voice assistant, these solutions combine form and function, seamlessly fitting into smart home ecosystems.

"We bring the showroom to you" has long been AIM's mantra—and the same holds true when it comes to showcasing and setting up smart shading systems. During each in-home consultation, AIM's team brings working motorized samples, walks homeowners through various automation options, and explains compatibility with platforms like Google Assistant, Amazon Alexa, and Apple HomeKit.

Products from top-tier brands such as Hunter Douglas and Alta are offered with options like scheduled automation, solar sensors, and scene settings to fit different lighting preferences throughout the day. For Colorado homes that experience wide temperature swings, this also means better control over indoor climate and potential savings on energy bills.

Motorization is especially popular in hard-to-reach windows, media rooms, and homes with young children or pets, where cordless safety and convenience are key. AIM's trained installers ensure every system is programmed correctly and optimized for the customer's specific lifestyle.
