FileWave has partnered with TRUCE, an all-in-one mobile app that helps manage screen time and promote healthy phone habits for students.

We are glad to work alongside FileWave to celebrate our outstanding civics teachers and ensure they have the classroom support they need.”

and CEO*

“At FileWave, we have always been proud to support teachers with solutions that maintain student focus and safety, and help teachers succeed in the classroom,” said Leon Vergnes, FileWave CEO. “Now, we’re excited to partner with the Bill of Rights Institute to recognize the outstanding work of civics teachers.”

The Bill of Rights Institute’s National Civics Teacher of the Year Award is designed to recognize outstanding civics teachers who are helping students learn about our nation’s story, our government, and how to live the ideals of a free and just society.

Ten finalists for the National Civics Teacher of the Year Award will be announced in August, and the winner be named in September. Last year's winner was Sherri Conditt, a veteran civics teacher at Woodland High School in Woodland, WA.

Bill of Rights Institute President and CEO David Bobb said companies like FileWave can play an important role in honoring the work of America's civics teachers.

"Civics teachers are essential to helping young people understand their role in society as principled, productive citizens," Bobb said. "We are glad to work alongside FileWave to celebrate our outstanding civics teachers and ensure they have the classroom support they need."
