Santa Cruz County's blend of oceanfront homes, wooded neighborhoods, and urban infrastructure creates ideal conditions for a wide range of pests, especially during warmer months. In particular:

- Yellow jackets build underground or structure-attached nests in summer and fall, posing sting risks.
- Rodents become more active in cooler evenings and often nest in attics, garages, or crawl spaces.
- Ants invade kitchens and gardens seeking food and moisture.
- Spiders thrive in undisturbed corners of homes, sheds, and garages.

Given increased interest in sustainable living, West Pest Co. emphasizes eco-conscious approaches that protect pollinators and minimize chemical use. The company also prioritizes education, offering customers prevention strategies to reduce reliance on ongoing treatments.
