Lactose Global Market Report 2025

How Much Is The Lactose Market Worth?

The size of the lactose market has seen a consistent rise over the past few years. It is projected to increase from $1.36 billion in 2024 to $1.4 billion in 2025 at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 2.9%. This sequential growth in the past period is a result of the escalated consumption of dairy products globally, the expansion in the worldwide food and beverage sector, increased demand for infant formula and nutritional supplements, the growth of the pharmaceutical and pharmaceutical excipients industry, as well as an elevated emphasis on health and nutrition awareness.

Over the next several years, the lactose market size is predicted to experience stable growth, reaching a value of $1.66 billion in 2029 with a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.4%. The surge during this projection period can be linked to the escalating utilization of lactose in pet food production, an increased presence of lactose-free and dairy-free items, the demand for low-fodmap and gut-friendly components, the rise of specialized applications in beauty and personal care, and the broadening of the lactose market in developing economies. Notable trends for this time frame encompass the usage of lactose in beauty and skincare items, high-grade and pharmaceutical-grade lactose, its use in animal feed, instantized lactose for rapid dissolving, and tailored lactose mixes.

What Are The Factors Driving The Lactose Market?

The lactose market is poised for growth, spurred on by the escalating production of dairy. Dairy production, encompassing the cultivation and processing of milk and associated products from animals like cows, goats, and sheep, triggers an increase in the quantity of raw milk available. Consequently, lactose, a byproduct of this process, also experiences an uptick in supply. An uptrend in dairy production likewise leads to a surfeit of lactose byproducts, making lactose more economically accessible and promoting its utilization in a variety of sectors such as food and non-food categories. For instance, reported by the European Commission (EC), the executive arm of the European Union (EU) based in Belgium, there was a 0.8% rise during the first half of 2023 in the EU's raw milk production. Hence, the lactose market's expansion is being propelled by the increased production of dairy.
