Understanding PDO Thread Lift

PDO thread lift (also known as suture or thread lifting) is a minimally invasive facial rejuvenation technique. Through this procedure, dissolvable threads made of polydioxanone (PDO) are inserted under the skin. These threads are then tightened to lift sagging skin, resulting in a more youthful and brighter appearance. The procedure has gained popularity due to its ability to create the coveted "fox eye" look (popularized by models like Bella Hadid & Kylie Jenner). PDO thread lift is often preferred over surgical treatments such as eyelid surgery and facelift because it has minimal downtime and fewer side effects & fraction of the cost. Although there may be some swelling, bruising, or redness post-treatment, most patients can resume their daily activities immediately after.

Fox Eye Lift with PDO Threads

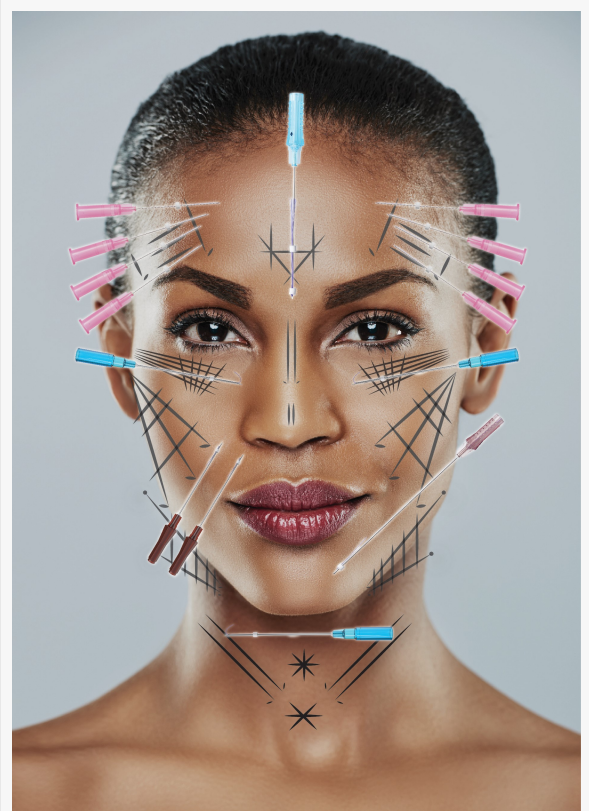

Achieving a lifted and youthful appearance has never been easier with the Fox Eye Lift using PDO Threads. This popular trend involves creating an elongated and slanted eye shape without surgery or anesthesia. Using dissolvable threads made from polydioxanone (PDO), this minimal downtime lunchtime procedure stimulates collagen production and lifts sagging skin, leaving behind natural-looking results for up to two years. Whether you want cat-eye or almond-shaped brows, thread lifting can help achieve your desired effect while minimizing side effects such as swelling and bruising. With new collagen stimulation and minimal healing process required, thread lifting is the perfect alternative to plastic surgery.

Procedure Details and Cost

If you're considering a PDO Thread Lift for Fox Eyes, it's important to understand the Procedure Details and Cost involved. Dissolvable PDO threads are inserted under your skin to stimulate collagen production, which tightens sagging skin around your eyes. This non-surgical procedure requires only local anesthesia and has minimal downtime.

On average you can expect to pay a fraction of the cost of a traditional upper blepharoplasty or endoscopic brow lift that require surgical intervention and can range upwards to $15,000-$30,000. At DermAlign Medical Aesthetics for your Fox Eye PDO Thread Lift you can expect to pay between $1675-$2575. Keep in mind that the cost of the procedure can vary depending on factors such as the number & types of threads used and the skill set & experience level of your aesthetic provider.

Other popular uses for thread lifting include brow lifts, facelifts, and cat eye lifts like those favored by celebrities. By stimulating both new collagen and elastin, this procedure works with your body's natural processes to achieve and maintain a more youthful appearance.
