Lauren Black - "Faded"

Some loves are forever, and some loves are better faded.”

Lauren Black

Lauren’s talent for pairing emotional honesty with undeniable hooks. Written by Lauren Black and Robert Crane Jr., and produced by Bobby Crane, the song blends warm nostalgia with an easygoing soundscape, ideal for late summer nights and road trip sing-alongs.

“It took me many years to be able to write a song like this and have it be true,” shares Lauren. “This song is about forgiveness, freedom, moving on, appreciation for the past, and a more tenderhearted view of the end of relationships, all wrapped into a fun, summery pop bubble. I hope it makes you dance, sing along, and remember that not everything is meant to last... and sometimes, that’s a beautiful thing.” - Lauren Black

With lyrical imagery that compares worn-out love to a favorite pair of faded denim, the track serves as a poignant reminder that some relationships leave a lasting imprint, even after they’re gone. It’s not a breakup ballad, it’s a graceful exhale.

“Some loves are forever, and some loves are better faded.”

"Faded" continues to solidify Lauren Black's reputation as a fresh voice in the modern country-pop space. With a sound that fans of Kelsea Ballerini, Carly Pearce, and Megan Moroney will instantly gravitate toward, Lauren's music speaks to a generation navigating love, change, and self-discovery.
