Structured in a Q&A format, the white paper addresses the most frequently asked questions from investors and advisors—including whether Rural and High Unemployment categories are truly backlogged, when China and India might access more than 7% of EB-5 visas, and how to evaluate the timing trade-offs between reserved and unreserved visa categories.

“At a time when visa availability is more critical than ever, this white paper is a timely and essential resource,” said Min Wu, Global Head of Sales at CanAm Enterprises. “It brings much-needed clarity to the complex dynamics that EB-5 investors are facing in 2025.”

Drawing from official data sources—including the U.S. Department of State, USCIS, and recent Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) releases—the paper provides practical, evidence-based answers to questions that can significantly affect an investor’s immigration timeline and strategy.

“CanAm is committed to transparency and education throughout the EB-5 journey, even the challenging topics for which there are no easy solutions,” said Christine Chen, Chief Operating Officer of CanAm Enterprises. “We commissioned this report to give investors and their advisors the tools they need to make confident, well-informed decisions.”

The white paper is available for free download at www.canamenterprises.com.
