How Hydro Jetting Works

Hydro jetting is a plumbing method that uses a powerful stream of pressurized water to clean the inside walls of pipes. This stream is strong enough to break apart and flush away grease, sludge, soap scum, and even intrusive tree roots that may have entered the sewer line. Unlike traditional tools that only push through a portion of the clog, hydro jetting thoroughly scours the pipe interior. The pressure can also be adjusted depending on the condition and material of the pipes, which helps protect the system from damage. This makes hydro jetting both effective and safe for most residential and commercial plumbing systems.

Better Results Than Traditional Methods

Many drain cleaning methods only offer temporary solutions. Tools like drain snakes may create a small opening in the clog but often leave behind residue on pipe walls. Over time, this buildup can cause another blockage in the same area.

In contrast, hydro jetting removes the entire obstruction and washes away leftover debris. This method helps restore full water flow and reduces the chances of recurring clogs. Because of its thoroughness, hydro jetting is widely used in homes, restaurants, offices, and other facilities that deal with heavy drain usage or repeated plumbing problems.

Safe for Pipes and the Environment

One major benefit of hydro jetting is that it does not rely on chemical drain cleaners, which can harm both plumbing systems and the environment. Chemical solutions may cause corrosion, weaken pipes, or leave behind toxic residue, especially in older plumbing.

Hydro jetting uses only clean, pressurized water to clear out drains, making it a more natural and pipe-friendly option. Since it avoids the use of chemicals, this method also helps reduce pollution and groundwater contamination. As a result, hydro jetting offers an eco-conscious choice for both emergency cleanouts and regular maintenance.

Ideal for Maintenance and Aging Plumbing

Hydro jetting from Patriot Plumbing & Rooter Inc. is not only effective for clearing clogs but also for keeping plumbing systems in good condition. It is often recommended as a routine service every 12 to 18 months to help prevent buildup and lower the risk of blockages.

This method is especially helpful in places with heavy drain use, like commercial kitchens, apartment buildings, or homes with older pipes. Systems that often collect grease, debris, or roots can benefit from regular hydro jetting.

When combined with a sewer camera inspection, this service can also reveal early signs of damage or buildup. Catching problems early helps property owners avoid more serious and costly repairs later on.
