“We're thrilled to welcome the STG team into the TouchSuite family,” said TouchSuite CEO Sam Zietz. “STG has built an incredible reputation for delivering operational excellence, deep industry expertise, and a POS platform that truly understands the needs of restaurants, retailers and franchise operators. Together, we'll unlock new opportunities for growth, including capital investment, cross-selling strategies, and future product enhancements.”

The STG team will remain fully intact, continuing to operate independently under its current leadership and brand. Both companies will begin collaborating on best practices, strategic collaboration, and shared innovation efforts that reflect the strengths of each organization. No immediate changes will be made to branding, product offering, or customer engagement processes. TouchSuite and STG leadership are aligned in their vision to preserve what makes STG great while enhancing it with strategic support and shared innovation.

“We are incredibly excited to partner with the TouchSuite team,” said Gary Kielich, President of STG. “By combining our nearly three decades of point-of-sale expertise with TouchSuite's leadership in kiosk technology and payment integration, we can broaden our solutions and deliver even greater value to customers throughout North America.”

In addition to expanding TouchSuite's presence in the POS space, the partnership opens the door to leveraging TouchSuite's merchant funding infrastructure, advanced analytics, and integration with technologies like Grubrr kiosks to deliver a more robust solution set to customers.
