

Inaugural HEAL Conference Kicks Off at Caesars Palace with Packed Sessions and Full Exhibit Hall

Healthcare Leaders Unite in Las Vegas for Groundbreaking Education, Innovation, and Networking at the First-Ever HEAL Conference

LAS VEGAS, NV, UNITED STATES, August 18, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The National Alliance of Wound Care and Ostomy® (NAWCO®) opened the doors today to the very first HEAL Conference — an event dedicated to Hands-On training, Education, Advancement, and Leadership for wound care professionals.

Drawing a wide range of attendees, including wound care nurses, physicians, therapists, educators, and industry partners, HEAL 2025 is setting a strong precedent for future years. Every hands-on session is fully booked, the exhibit hall is sold out, and the energy on site reflects a shared passion for advancing wound care.

The conference features an inspiring keynote presentation from Allison Massari, award-winning speaker and burn survivor, whose story resonates deeply with healthcare professionals. Over the three-day event, attendees will explore cutting-edge solutions, engage in skills-based training, and build meaningful connections across the profession.

"I'm so excited to see the response to HEAL for this first year," said Cindy Broadus, Executive Director of NAWCO®. "We look forward to building on this momentum in 2026 and continuing to make HEAL the go-to destination for wound care education and collaboration."

The HEAL Conference will return next year, taking place September 14–16, 2026, in Louisville, Kentucky.
